Ron R Bielefeld | Whistling Wings Photography workshops focus on understanding bird behavior with the goal of getting you, the photographer, the best images of the bird species being pursued. You can expect to take away from this workshop:

- Knowledge about the habits and habitats of the bird or birds being photographed
- The best approach for getting good images of the bird or bird being photographed
- The best camera settings and equipment for the photographic situation

Only a small number of participants attend in order to provide thorough and individualized attention to each photographer.

Participants must have a working knowledge of their photographic equipment. Other than incidental or informal comments, no instruction will be provided regarding equipment use.

Participants are expected to respect schedules and be punctual with respect to meeting times set. Tardy photographers negatively affect everyone's experience, thus activities will proceed as scheduled and will not be delayed. Cell phone numbers should be provided to the workshop leader prior to the first day of the workshop to ensure good communications.

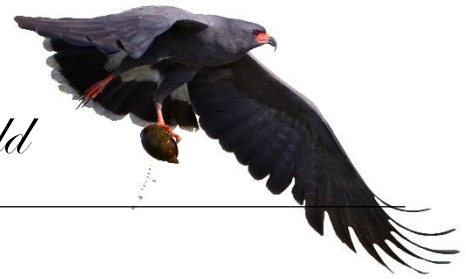

To preserve a fun and constructive environment for all participants, participants who are disruptive to the workshop will be removed from the workshop without refund or other compensation; including travel costs associated with returning home, or to any future destination post workshop dismissal.

No smoking is allowed and cell phones must be turned off during shooting. To ensure everyone receives full benefits of the workshop, requests may be made regarding noise and movements as long as these requests are reasonable. Discuss any concerns at the time they present themselves. Do not wait until after shooting time, as it is then too late to rectify issues.

Special needs with regard to food/diet, accessibility, allergies, or other considerations should be communicated to Ron R Bielefeld | Whistling Wings Photography with your registration.
