ARTIST'S STATEMENT

It's all about the line. At Syracuse University I painted large cut wood shapes layered with subject based on where we live and objects that surround us. Gradually shifting to make flat surfaces with wood edges as the contour of the objects. Over the years the shapes needed definition and got glued into place in rectangular format. My more matured art emphasizes the line painted on top of the flat surfaces. With the same visual vocabulary of my youth, I now paint the line. Subject matter is blown up into abstraction then broken down into simple compositions, retaining only the most valuable lines, shapes and color hints as reference, wanting the viewer to have an immediate familiar response. I sand, carve, scar the paneled surface harshly leaving raw grain of the wood exposed and vulnerable. Sections are stained with glazes to create sensitivity while other areas with wax and varnishes for weight and movement in those built-up areas. My paintings show confidence in flat rectangular framed format. The title forces and instructs the viewer to share in the line's deliberate simple awkward boldness. .
